

Arrivals and Prices of Garlic in India during 2019 and 2020

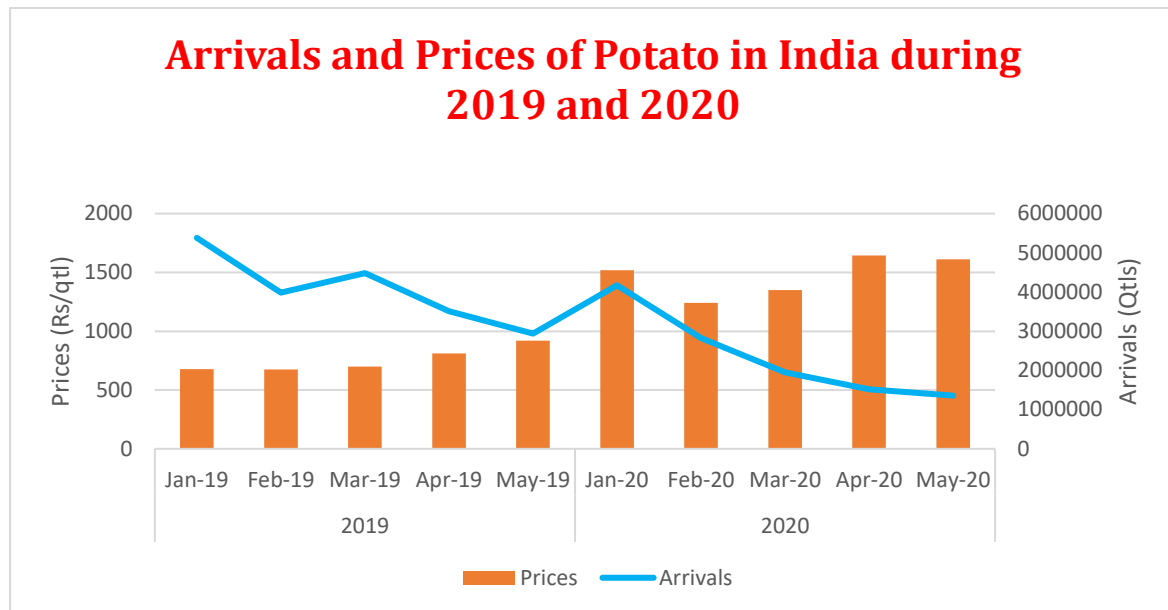

During 2019, the prices of garlic showed an increasing trend from January to May, whereas, they reached peak during January, 2020 and started declining thereafter. It was also noticed that in 2019, the arrivals were more or less similar from January till April and then started declining. However during the same period in 2020, the arrivals recorded a declining trend.

Arrivals and Prices of Onion in India during 2019 and 2020

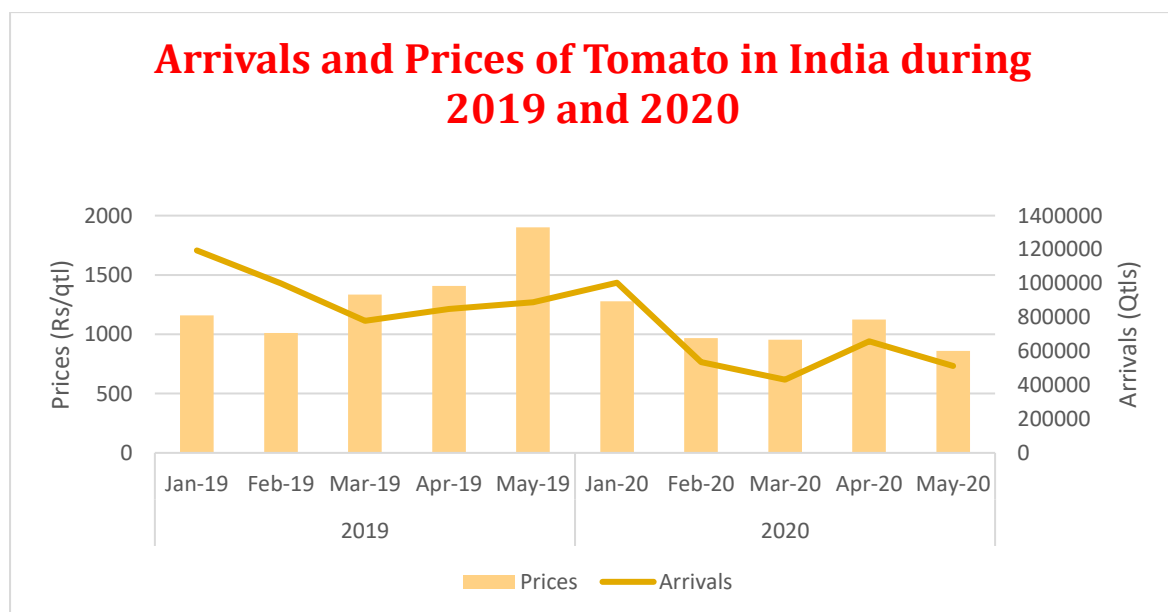

The prices of onion in 2019 and 2020 exhibited a similar trend as that of garlic i.e in the year 2019, there was a slight increase in the prices from January to May. The maximum price during May can be attributed to the lowest arrivals during the same period. In 2020, a declining trend in both arrivals and prices was observed from January to May which indicates a positive relation between the two factors.

During 2019, an increasing trend was observed in the prices of potato from January and reached maximum in the month of May during which the arrivals were lean. Compared to 2019, the prices of potato during 2020 are higher with a continuous declining trend in arrivals from January till May. This shows an impact of COVID-19 on the arrivals which resulted in higher prices.

In the case of tomato an irregular pattern of prices were observed in both the periods. However, the arrivals in 2019 and 2020 exhibited more or less a similar pattern wherein, peak arrivals were recorded during the months of January and minimum in the month of March. During 2020, the highest price was observed in January during which the arrivals were also maximum.
